UK Outlook for Saturday 1 May 2021 to Monday 10 May 2021:
The cold and showery pattern of previous days is expected to continue to affect the UK at the start of this period, bringing a mixture of sunshine, showers, and a cold east to northeasterly wind. Showers will be most frequent in the north and east, but could become quite widespread overland during the day. Some wintriness is probable over high ground of Scotland. A gradual transition to something more broadly unsettled is expected to follow, with areas of cloud, rain and stronger winds arriving from the west, although the north of the UK could stay in the colder, more showery conditions. Temperatures are likely to be colder than average overall, with chilly nights and occasional overnight frost, but may trend to nearer average for a time.
